Journey Into Southwestern China on Yan Can Cook: Spice Kingdom

One of the Bay Area's best-loved chefs is back for a new adventure! Martin Yan returns to KQED with the new series Yan Can Cook: Spice Kingdom, through which he'll explore the local flavors of Chengdu — the capital of southwestern China's Sichuan province.

Recognized as a UNESCO City of Gastronomy in 2010, Chengdu is brimming with delicious dishes and snacks on every street. Watch as Yan uncovers the traditions, places and people at the heart of Chengdu's thriving food scenes, from attending a bamboo banquet to visiting a few of the city's estimated 30,000 hot pot restaurants.

Yan goes beyond Chengdu's typical Sichuan classics — such as Mapo Tofu, Kung Pao Chicken and Ganbian Sijidou (dry stir-fried green beans) — and journeys deep into the hidden corners of the region's cuisine to discover the rich cultural and culinary traditions of southwestern China.

In 13 episodes, Yan takes viewers throughout the Spice Kingdom and then shows them how to create dishes based on what he's learned. And no excuses for not trying out these recipes in your own kitchen because if "Yan Can Cook, So Can You!"

Yan has spent his career promoting Chinese cuisine. Born in Guangzhou in southern China, Yan is a second-generation "culinarian," who was first inspired by his mother in the tiny kitchen of their family restaurant. After receiving his formal restaurant training in Hong Kong, Yan immigrated to Calgary, Canada, where, on one snowy day, he was asked to appear on a news program to demonstrate Chinese cooking. The rest, as they say, is television history.

Premiering in 1982, Yan Can Cook grew to become one of the most popular cooking programs on public television, both in North America and on the global stage. Yan has hosted more than 1,500 episodes of Yan Can Cook, broadcast in over 50 countries. The series has twice won the James Beard Award for Best Food Documentary Show.

KQED Presents is proud to represent Yan Can Cook: Spice Kingdom nationally, which will be distributed via American Public Television in Spring 2018.

Yan Can Cook: Spice Kingdom* premieres Wednesday, February 14, at 7pm on KQED 9.

Join Martin Yan and PBS Food for Chinese New Year

The Year of the Dog kicks off Friday, February 16! No Chinese New Year is complete without a home-cooked feast, and this year, Martin Yan and PBS Food are teaming up to bring the best to your table. Check pbs.org/food for traditional recipes and an instructional video leading up to Chinese New Year.

Master the Secrets of Celebrity Chefs

KQED invites you into the kitchens of award-winning Bay Area chefs with Bay Area Bites' new Celebrity Chefs series, featuring video and step-by-step photos of local chefs preparing their signature dishes. Impress your friends and family with these tried-and-true recipes for mouthwatering dishes and learn techniques straight from the masters.

The series kicks off with Tanya Holland, chef-owner of the celebrated Oakland soul food restaurant Brown Sugar Kitchen. Known for her inventive take on modern soul food as well as for traditional comfort classics, Holland is committed to supporting her community by hiring locally, training aspiring chefs, and purchasing coffee, produce and wine from Oakland producers.

"Brown Sugar Kitchen has become more than just a restaurant, it's a community. West Oakland is more than just a place where we live — it's our home now, and we can't imagine living anywhere else. People say that I've changed West Oakland, but the truth is, West Oakland has changed me," says Holland.

Brown Sugar Kitchen recently earned a Michelin Bib Gourmand and is currently expanding to new locations in uptown Oakland and San Francisco's Ferry Building.

A season 15 Top Chef contender and member of the prestigious Les Dames d'Escoffier, Holland will encourage you to get into the kitchen to create memorable experiences around the table with family and friends.

Learn how to make Holland's famous Chocolate Bourbon Pecan Pie, Shrimp and Grits, Fried Chicken and Waffles, Dirty Vegetarian Rice and more at kqed.org/celebritychefs.

Tanya Holland's Vegetarian Dirty Rice

Yield: 6-8 servings

1-1/2 cups basmati rice
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 green onion, finely chopped
1 green bell pepper, diced
1 red bell pepper, diced
1 heaping tablespoon minced garlic
1 tablespoon chopped jalapeño chile
1/4 cup Worcestershire sauce
2 tablespoons tamari or soy sauce
2 bay leaves
1 tablespoon chopped fresh thyme
1 tablespoon Creole spice
2 teaspoons freshly ground black pepper
1 teaspoon coarse salt
2 cups fresh spinach leaves
Fresh chopped Italian parsley for garnish

In a large bowl, cover rice with cold water. Stir the rice and drain. Repeat this process 5 to 6 times until water runs clear. In a medium saucepan, add washed rice and cover with enough water to measure 1 inch above rice. Bring to a boil, then simmer, partially covered until just done, about 20 minutes; do not overcook. In a large skillet over medium-high heat, heat the oil. Add the onion, peppers, garlic and chile and cook, stirring, until vegetables are tender, about 10 minutes. Add Worcestershire sauce and cooked rice and heat through, stirring until rice is coated with sauce. Add bay leaves, thyme, Creole spice, pepper and salt and stir. Add spinach. Lower heat. Cover and cook for another 15 minutes. Taste and adjust seasonings. Garnish with parsley. Serve immediately.

Arts' New Music Editor Will Pep Up Your Playlists

Meet Nastia Voynovskaya, KQED Arts' new music editor. Prior to joining KQED, Voynovskaya was the music editor at East Bay Express, and has written for VICE, the San Francisco Chronicle, SFMOMA Open Space, Bandcamp and more. She also served as the online editor for Hi-Fructose magazine and arts editor for The Daily Californian at the University of California at Berkeley. Voynovskaya graduated from U.C. Berkeley in 2012, with a B.A. in comparative literature.

What were your earliest experiences writing about music and when did it click that you wanted to do it professionally?

The first piece I ever published was for a student fashion magazine at U.C. Berkeley; it was about a Lil B's outfit at a Pack concert in 2008. Not long after, I joined the student newspaper, The Daily Cal, where I was assigned to cover Noise Pop in 2010. Since then, I've pretty much been addicted — though music writing became my main beat in 2015, when I became music editor at East Bay Express. Once I started writing predominantly about music, it clicked for me that my professional world could merge with what I do for fun, which is go to shows.

Which types of stories/artists do you gravitate toward?

I have a great appreciation for most genres, but I'm most interested in stories with a strong human-interest angle, beyond "this album is cool." I love to write about artists who are pushing boundaries creatively, sparking conversations about social issues or working to serve the community in some way. E-40, Goapele, Mistah F.A.B., Saturn Rising, King Woman and Brass Liberation Orchestra have been some of my favorite interviews.

Who's your dream interview and why?

Rihanna. I love her music, her confidence, her fashion sense and her business sense. Also, Björk and Missy Elliott.

How many shows do you see on average every week? What are some highlights from the past year?

I'd say anywhere between one and three shows a week. The best performances I saw all year were Solange — at FYF Fest, Outside Lands and the Greek Theatre — Björk and Missy Elliott at FYF, Gucci Mane at the Warfield and Moses Sumney at Great American Music Hall.

What are your favorite venues in the Bay Area?

Fox Theatre and Great American Music Hall for moving, near-spiritual experiences; Elbo Room, the Legionnaire Saloon, the Layover and Starline Social Club for intimate dance parties and shows.

American Creed Screening for Educators at KQED

Are there ideals Americans share in common? How can educators help students explore and discuss the differences that divide us? Stanford professors Condoleezza Rice and David Kennedy teamed up across party lines to ask these questions in the new film American Creed.

The one-hour documentary features stories of unlikely activists, including baseball manager Joe Maddon, novelist Junot Diaz and others who come together to build community around the values that unite us. Interspersed among the stories, first-generation college students discuss what the American Creed means to them.

In partnership with the National Writing Project and Facing History and Ourselves, KQED is hosting an advanced screening of American Creed for educators, 5-8pm on Thursday, February 22, at KQED's San Francisco studios.

KQED invites educators to meet the filmmakers Sam Ball and Kate Stilley Steiner, and learn about how to spur conversation, writing and media-making with your students based on the themes in American Creed. There will be food, drinks, special giveaways and time to connect with other educators. Spots are limited and open to anyone who teaches young people in a classroom, after-school program or a community organization.

More Than a Month: A Black History Film and Conversation Series for Teachers and Students

Together with Independent Television Service (ITVS) and PBS Education, KQED is offering a series of film screenings for classrooms followed by panel discussions around Black History Month. Viewers will be able to ask producers and directors questions live through ITVS' OVEE streaming platform, interacting in real time via text-based chat.

Sighted Eyes/Feeling Heart* February 1, 10am

At a time when women, people of color and homosexuals were confined to the margins of society, Lorraine Hansberry (1930-1965), best known for her play A Raisin in the Sun, challenged U.S. society to live up to its ideals. Sighted Eyes/Feeling Heart tells the dramatic story of the young, gifted black woman who chose words to fight injustice.

Tell Them We Are Rising* February 15, 10am

Tell Them We Are Rising explores the pivotal role historically black colleges and universities (HBCUs) have played in American history, culture and identity over the course of 150 years. This film reveals the rich history of HBCUs and the power of higher education to transform lives and advance civil rights and equality in the face of injustice.

KQED Welcomes Four New Members to Community Advisory Panel

The KQED Community Advisory Panel (CAP) is an all-volunteer board composed of local individuals who deeply value KQED public media. Their commitment to community engagement helps the Board of Directors and KQED content managers ensure that the station serves the cultural and programming needs of its members.

We have assembled a CAP reflecting the diversity and depth of our KQED audience. This year's panel members come from different regions, backgrounds and areas of interest. They share a passion for meaningful, engaging and relevant community-driven content. We are deeply invested in developing innovative and inspiring programming at KQED. We look forward to strengthening bonds with our community through outreach, special events and cultural celebrations. I am honored to be serving as chair of the CAP and welcome your programming thoughts, ideas and feedback.

—Dr. Beverly Yates, Community Advisory Panel Chair

Jorge Cuento is a product manager at Google, where he strives to combine his technical skills and economics knowledge to develop products that empower others by opening doors to new economic opportunities. Originally from Southern California, he grew up in a low-income, immigrant, Latino family and experienced firsthand the positive impact that public media can have by making high-quality content accessible to people from all backgrounds.

Nasrina Bargzie is an Afghan-American Muslim refugee residing in Concord. She is currently a counsel at Boies, Schiller and Flexner LLP in Oakland and a lecturer at Stanford Law. Previously, she directed the National Security Program at Asian Law Caucus, working with directly impacted Arab, Middle Eastern, Muslim and South Asian communities, and she worked at the ACLU.

Janet Miller Evans provides coaching, employee development and career transition services to corporations, nonprofit-organizations and private clients at her firm Janet Miller Evans & Associates. She is an adjunct professor in Professional Studies at National University. Previously, she held leadership roles at FedEx, IBM, UPS and Comcast.

Leah Toeniskoetter leads Corporate Citizenship in the western states for Deloitte. A native of the Santa Cruz Mountains, she grew up outdoors and believes in preserving open spaces. Her years at the University of Notre Dame led to study in Europe and Central America and ignited a life of cultural understanding and volunteerism including serving as a Peace Corps volunteer in Bolivia.

Your 2017 Contribution Summary Is on the Way

KQED Members: This year, for your convenience, we will email a copy of your 2017 KQED Charitable Giving Statement to you, which means that even more of your financial support will go right back into the programming you love because of the reduction in time and costs associated with paper mail.

If you do not receive a copy, electronic or paper, of your 2017 Giving Statement by the end of this month, please send an email to member@kqed.org or call us at 415-553-2150.

Mary Louise Kelly to Host All Things Considered

Kelly McEvers to host Embedded full time

Following a national search, Mary Louise Kelly has been selected to succeed Robert Siegel as host of NPR's flagship news program, All Things Considered, alongside Audie Cornish and Ari Shapiro.

Most recently, Kelly was NPR's national security correspondent, covering the CIA and other spy agencies. She has been NPR's point person on the Russia investigation for the past year and has brought listeners in-depth coverage of terrorism, wars and rising nuclear powers.

"Mary Louise Kelly is an immensely talented reporter, and her deep command of the issues make her a formidable interviewer. After a lengthy search, we found precisely what we were looking for close to home. We are thrilled to have her on air every afternoon," said Chris

Turpin, acting senior vice president of News. "Mary Louise combines rigorous thinking with the ability to put herself in the listener's shoes. She will help us usher in a new era of the program."

Kelly McEvers, who for the past two years has co-hosted both All Things Considered and the Embedded podcast, has stepped down from All Things Considered to work exclusively as host and executive producer of Embedded, which will increase its output in 2018. Embedded will expand to become a premiere outlet for NPR's original, in-depth journalism and will showcase McEvers' inexhaustible curiosity and passion for tackling complicated, challenging subjects at the center of our culture.

Brokenwood, New Zealand is a small, rural town where memories — and animosities — run deep. When Detective Senior Sergeant Mike Shepherd arrives on assignment to investigate a possible murder, he begins to reassess his life and decides to stay on indefinitely. As he settles into the quieter country life, he forges relationships with his colleagues, including Detective Constable Kristin Sims who initially questions his unusual method of doing things. Together, they navigate small town politics amid murder and other mysteries.

New episodes from The Brokenwood Mysteries season 3 air Saturday, February 10, at 8pm and 9:33pm on KQED Plus.

Sudan is the last male of his sub-species, the Northern White Rhinoceros. Watch as Nature chronicles his harrowing journey on “The Last Rhino” through the international cast of characters who have been involved in Sudan’s life, from when he was snatched as a calf from his mother’s side in war-torn Central Africa, to his captivity as a prized exhibit in a cold, concrete zoo behind the Iron Curtain while poaching devastated his kind to extinction back home. Now 43 years old and half-blind, Sudan is living out his days under 24-hour armed guard, on a protective sanctuary in Kenya.

Nature’s “The Last Rhino” premieres Wednesday, February 9, at 9pm on KQED 9.
