American Waste Management: What Can Be Done?

Airs Wednesday, June 3, at 8pm on KQED 88.5 FM
When China banned importing foreign recyclables, many Americans learned that recycling is not a tidy, closed process. The overabundance of waste is a global problem and waste management requires everyone’s efforts. We’ll visit one of the biggest landfills in the U.S. to discuss how our country handles waste. We’ll also look at creative solutions for waste management, highlighting The Landfill Orchestra in Paraguay that performs concerts on musical instruments made from plastic waste to raise awareness of the global problem. And we’ll examine successful waste management in Sweden, where they handle most of their own waste and also import it from other countries.

In Search of the Quarter-Life Crisis

Airs Wednesday, June 17, at 8pm on KQED 88.5 FM
Whether you’re a millennial or Gen Z-er, or you have one in your life, you know that these generations are constantly questioning society’s expectations. “Because that’s the way it is” just doesn’t satisfy their inquiring minds. Could this be why the “quarter-life crisis” has become a global phenomenon? We’ll hear young people’s perspectives worldwide about conflicting expectations and pressures, and their experiences during their quarter-life crises. We’ll also hear from experts researching the phenomenon, ask whether today’s millennials are more vulnerable to it than past generations and hear some words of wisdom on how to handle the turmoil.

PODCASTS

What are the best podcasts to listen to right now? We asked Amanda Font, KQED’s The California Report Magazine producer, what she recommends. Here are her picks.

STARTER EPISODE
“These Five People Challenge the Notion of Blindness as a Deficit”
At The California Report Magazine, we take people on an audio road trip of California through the lens of interesting people and places. This episode explores the auditory world of some visually impaired people.

STARTER EPISODE
“Call Russ Ewing”
Criminal, from Radiotopia, is not your average true crime podcast. Beyond the act of crime itself, they explore forensics, justice, policing and often very odd circumstances. This episode tells the story of a reporter-turned-negotiator who became an intermediary for suspects afraid they’d be killed by police.

STARTER EPISODE
“Dr. Muller”
In each episode of Heavyweight, Jonathan Goldstein, using his sarcastic Canadian wit, explores a past bad memory with someone hoping to get clarity or closure. In this episode, the past he returns to is his own, in search of a therapist who long ago concluded, “This isn’t working . . . because of you.”

Listen via Apple Podcasts, Google Play, Stitcher, the NPR One app, Spotify or wherever you get your podcasts.

Staff Picks

The New York Times called it “irresistible,” People Magazine hailed it as “addictive” and it was one of the most popular programs KQED has aired in years. Along with millions of other viewers, I fell in love with Downton Abbey, the award-winning series from Julian Fellowes, as we followed the Granthams and their servants through sweeping change, scandals, love, ambitions, heartbreak and hope. Attending some of KQED’s early events with the cast is one of my lifetime highlights. The series was truly special and I was happy to watch it over and over on broadcast and on KQED Passport. The series expires from the Passport library on June 30, along with other favorites, including The Manners of Downton Abbey, but you still have time! Log on and start streaming all six seasons of Downtown Abbey now to say goodbye to all of our friends at Downton.

—Meredith Speight, KQED Director of Television Programming

Women Trailblazers Kick Off the Summer Season

It seems odd to say this in the same sentence, but I love Mae West and Toni Morrison. They were both trailblazers. Their stories, and those of other groundbreaking women, are featured this summer as PBS honors the centennial of women’s right to vote.

Mae West is known for her bawdy movies and one-liners, but there’s more to her than you may know. A smart, powerful woman who publicly embraced female sexuality early on, she was also a playwright who had a successful play on Broadway and was a screenwriter. Her risqué films were subjected to the Motion Picture Production Code, which regulated the industry. Her witty double entendres were one way she sometimes skirted censorship. Mae West: Dirty Blonde airs on American Masters on Tuesday, June 16, at 8pm on KQED 9.

Toni Morrison was an author, playwright, professor, critic and editor whose poetic depictions of Black America were portrayed in lauded novels including Beloved, The Bluest Eye and Song of Solomon. She was the first Black woman to win the Nobel Prize in Literature, and also won a Pulitzer Prize, a Presidential Medal of Freedom and many other honors. She fought censorship, too, when one of her books was banned at a high school. Toni Morrison: The Pieces I Am airs on American Masters on Tuesday, June 23, at 8pm on KQED 9. —Ellyn Hament

DID YOU KNOW?

• Morrison worked for Random House, where she was the first Black woman senior fiction editor.
• Mae West rewrote a script for Paramount Pictures and saved the studio from bankruptcy.
• When Morrison’s parents couldn’t pay rent; their landlord set their house on fire while they were inside (they survived).

SATURDAY NIGHT MOVIE

The Hudsucker Proxy

Airs Saturday, June 20, at 8pm on KQED 9

The Coen brothers wrote, produced and directed this 1994 comedy about a naïve business school graduate who’s promoted to president of a manufacturing company in a stock scam. Tim Robbins, Paul Newman and Jennifer Jason Leigh star.

Everyone Has a Story to Tell
Share Yours with PBS American Portrait

PBS American Portrait is a national storytelling project about what it means to be an American today — and you’re invited to participate. By asking participants thought-provoking questions, the project will gather stories, photographs and videos then weave them together into a collective portrait. Submissions will live on a Web platform and will inspire social media conversations, and will also contribute to a digital series and a nationally broadcast docuseries scheduled to air in early 2021. For more information and to share your story, please go to pbs.org/americanportrait.
