JULY LINEUP

Rebecca Solnit in Dialogue

Tuesday, July 12, at 7pm, in person: $15

Writer, historian and activist Rebecca Solnit launches Not Too Late, a project addressing climate despair and grief. Designed as an on-ramp for newcomers to the climate movement, she discusses how we're shaping the climate future now.

Black Women in Pop Music: An Interview & Listening Party with Danyel Smith

Thursday, July 14, at 7pm, in person: $10

A personal and musical interview with music journalist Danyel Smith, author of Shine Bright: A Very Personal History of Black Women in Pop, hosted by KQED's Ariana Proehl in KQED's top-floor lounge.

Ken Burns' The U.S. and the Holocaust

Monday, July 25, at 7:30pm, at the Castro Theatre, San Francisco: $23

The San Francisco Jewish Film Festival and KQED present a special preview of The U.S. and the Holocaust, a new three-part documentary from PBS by Ken Burns, Lynn Novick and Sarah Botstein. Exploring America's response to one of the greatest humanitarian crises in history, the series unearths the complex connections between antisemitism, racial injustice and white nationalism. After the screening, the directors will join veteran KQED host Michael Krasny for an onstage conversation.

Ice Cream Social: Cultural Infusion

Thursday, July 28, at 7pm, in person: $20

Taste local small-batch ice cream made by Bad Walters, Koolfi and de La Creamery. Check, Please! Bay Area producer Cecilia Phillips talks with the ice cream makers about how they infuse their cultural backgrounds into their flavors.

KQED PARTNER EVENTS

Students Step up to the Mic in KQED's Annual Youth Takeover

Milpitas High School students came to KQED headquarters to record their Youth Takeover pieces. Photo by Amanda Vigil/KQED.

Bay Area students' voices filled KQED's broadcasts in April during our fifth annual Youth Takeover. Launched in 2018, the program encourages, honors and elevates the voices of young people by empowering them to tell us about the issues that impact them, their families and their communities. It also offers KQED listeners an authentic and insightful look into the ways the next generation sees our world, future and the challenges before us.

This unique, year-long program pairs high school students in classrooms from nearly every Bay Area county with KQED journalists, empowering kids to pitch, write and produce stories for KQED's broadcast, podcast and online programming while their teachers receive curricular support and customized assistance from KQED. This year, the program expanded to include more working sessions with each of the 16 classrooms by inviting participants to create pieces in our recording studios, to participate in an audio workshop in collaboration with PRX Podcast Garage and to engage with more than 50 KQED staff members at career panels.

Though the live broadcasts are over, you can still hear Youth Takeover stories, including Clara talking about her experience with imposter syndrome on The California Report Magazine and John Henry High School students, who worked with Bay Curious on an episode about sneaker culture. Listen in at kqed.org/youthtakeover.

New Season of MindShift Explores What School Should Be Like Now

After three long academic years of learning during a pandemic, what should school be like? In the upcoming seventh season of the MindShift podcast series, which begins this month, hosts Ki Sung and Nimah Gobir use solutions-driven storytelling to tackle relevant issues, including the role of surveillance technology when students take tests; the possibilities of having a positive middle-school experience; and how changing school start times may help the students and avoid teacher burn-out.

Launched in 2016, MindShift enables teachers, parents and caregivers to discover solutions for raising our kids in the modern era. A spinoff of the popular blog and email newsletter, the series offers listeners an inside look at how schools are developing solutions to meet students' needs. Listeners hear from educators and experts who are creating pathways for students to flourish.

You can find new episodes of MindShift every other Tuesday from July 19 to September 27. And, coming in November, MindShift will release monthly mini episodes featuring a notable teacher or researcher addressing education news events as they happen. You can find MindShift wherever you get your podcasts or at kqed.org/podcasts/mindshift.

How Housing Instability, Racial Inequality, Poverty and Homelessness Interconnect

Join KQED for a conversation on one of Northern California's most crucial topics in "Housing, Race and Homelessness: Ending Poverty in the Bay Area" airing on KQED public radio 88.5 FM on July 6 at 10pm. In this special broadcast hosted by the Commonwealth Club, you'll hear from California leaders, including former Stockton mayor and founder of End Poverty in California (EPIC) Michael Tubbs and All Home CEO Tomiquia Moss. During the program, they'll explore the ways that housing instability interconnects with racial inequality, poverty and homelessness. In addition, guests will examine principles for moving forward as well as concrete next steps.

PODCASTS

What are the best podcasts to listen to right now? We asked Rightnowish Intern Corey Antonio Rose for recommendations.

STARTER EPISODE

"Up in Smoke: Cannabis, Crime and Creating Equity"

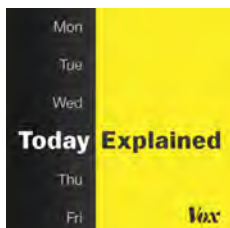

Rightnowish is a podcast that tackles how art and the people who make it shape the Bay Area. In this episode, host Pendarvis Harshaw sits down with Chaney Turner, current chair of the Oakland Cannabis Commission, to talk about the state of legalized marijuana and how it intersects with banking, equity and community safety.

STARTER EPISODE

"Talking the Rise of Anti-LGBTQ Legislation"

Talk Policy to Me is a biweekly podcast that breaks down policy battles in our country and examines how they affect our daily lives. In this episode, host Amy Benziger dives into how the rise in representation from people across the gender spectrum has spurred a wave of legislative backlash from conservative lawmakers.

STARTER EPISODE

"Is Abortion in the Constitution?"

Today, Explained answers the questions you may have about the day's news and helps you to understand what it means for tomorrow. In this episode, NYU Law Professor Kenji Yoshino explains the concept of "enumerated rights" and how it intersects with the decision in Roe v. Wade.

Don't Miss This!

Grantchester, Season 7

Grantchester is one of those shows that always delivers; I'm clearing my calendar to binge the latest season when it premieres on July 10 at 9pm. The most recent season was a doozy with Reverend Will Davenport finding himself at odds with his own ideals when Leonard was caught up in a scandal, Geordie's principles shaken, a distraught Mrs. Chapman and a defiant Cathy. The series picks up in the long, hot summer of 1959. With a new decade just around the corner, the question of what the future holds is on everyone's minds. But before the fifties roll into the swinging sixties, there are some crimes to solve and life-changing decisions to be made that may change life in Grantchester forever. Members can see all of Season 7 on July 10, when all six episodes of the new season become available on KQED Passport.

Passport Exclusive

Thou Shalt Not Kill, Season 4, on Walter's Choice (Direct to Passport)

Beginning July 28, binge the 12-episode season of this Italian language crime drama featuring Detective Valeria Ferro. This is a digital-first release; there's no broadcast for this season with this date. (Note: Seasons 1 to 3 of Thou Shalt Not Kill are also available.)

Can't Wait?

Rebus

Rebus is a crime drama mystery set in Edinburgh, Scotland, starring the mercurial Detective Inspector John Rebus, whose investigations take him through the city's ancient beauty and into its more sinister quarters. Season 4 won't be broadcast until later this year, but Passport members can stream it now. (Seasons 2 to 3 are also available.)

Explore America Outdoors with Baratunde Thurston

What do the outdoors mean to you? Our relationship with the outdoors is deeper and more important than you may think. This new travel and adventure series is hosted by Baratunde Thurston, New York Times bestselling author of How to Be Black and podcast creator and host of How to Citizen with Baratunde. He takes us on a journey across the United States to explore our country's diverse regions and how the landscapes shape the way we work, play and interact with our environment. As Baratunde travels, he discovers a range of attitudes towards the outdoors; most importantly, a deeply held belief that being outside is essential to our wellbeing and that access to outdoor spaces is worth fighting for.

In the series, you'll meet an ultra-marathoner, who runs in the brutal heat of summer; the mayor of a town of one; and an elder of the Timbisha Shoshone tribe, who shows us that Death Valley is a place where life blooms. And from kayakers saving a polluted river to Black surfers claiming their place on the waves, Baratunde explores how Angelinos connect with the outdoors in Southern California — and much more.

As climate change dictates where outdoor enthusiasts can go, and Americans debate how wild spaces can be made more accessible to all, America Outdoors with Baratunde Thurston reveals a deeper understanding of our relationship with the natural world. The series is in six parts and premieres every Tuesday from 9 to 10pm between July 5 and August 9. The first episode of America Outdoors airs on Tuesday, July 5, at 9pm on KQED 9.

DID YOU KNOW? Outdoor Trailblazers & Environmentalists

- Born into slavery during the Civil War, Charles Young served as a captain of an all-Black regiment at San Francisco's Presidio in 1903 and became the first Black national park superintendent.
- On April 6, 1909, Black explorer Matthew Henson was part of the Peary party said to have reached the geographic North Pole. Henson may have been the first in the party to have arrived there.
- After witnessing a massive oil spill that ravaged the San Francisco Bay in 1971, John Francis, nicknamed Planetwalker, swore off all motorized transportation and walked everywhere he went for 22 years. Five years into his on-foot revolt, he took a 17-year-long vow of silence.

COMING IN AUGUST

The Boleyns: A Scandalous Family

Check your August issue for dates and times

This epic, three-part series depicts the rise and fall of the Boleyn family during the reign of King Henry VIII in 1500s England. Told through the narration of historical academics juxtaposed with actors performing several significant scenes, it's a story of love, sex and betrayal from the family's unique perspective.

JULY PICK

The Hour, Season 2

Tuesday, July 5, at 9pm
on KQED Plus

The second and final season rejoins The Hour team a year on in 1957 where new characters are introduced, including a new head of BBC News. There are two big issues that dominate the series and join together: vice in London's Soho and the nuclear race.

SATURDAY NIGHT MOVIE

Akeelah and the Bee

Saturday, July 23, at
8pm on KQED 9

Akeelah (Keke Palmer), an 11-year-old girl from South Los Angeles, discovers that she has a talent for spelling, which she hopes will get her to the National Spelling Bee. Although her mother Tanya (Angela Bassett) objects to this goal, Akeelah finds help from a mysterious teacher, Dr. Larabee (Laurence Fishburne).

How to Be Likeable in a Crisis

► Friday, July 1, at 10:32pm on KQED Plus

This dark comedy, which follows a public relations specialist employed by a prestigious university, is one of Japan's most popular television dramas. Although the specialist tries to escape a slew of crises, he's tasked with confronting conflicts. New episodes air every Friday in July in Japanese with English subtitles.

POV: Wuhan Wuhan

► Monday, July 11, at 10pm on KQED 9

This documentary was filmed in February and March 2020 in Wuhan, China, where the coronavirus was first detected. With unprecedented access at the peak of the pandemic lockdown, the film captures the early days of the virus as residents and frontline healthcare workers grapple with the invisible, deadly killer.
