

CLOZE EXERCISE

The Dream Act From KQED's Perspectives, 11/2010

Born in Mexico but raised in the U.S. since age two, Youth Radio's Estafania longs for U.S. citizenship.

My high school classmates are from all over the world. They travel a lot, ___ visit their families, and even _____ school trips to countries _____ France and Mexico. When friends ask why ___ can't travel, I say my family _____ afford it. But really it's because I might never be able to _____ home to the U.S.

I consider myself Mexican-American. But because _____ birth certificate says "Mexico" instead of "United States," there are _____ of things I'm not able to _____ in this country, even though I've lived here _____ I was two years old.

Not being a U.S. citizen _____ a handicap when I was younger. I just knew I had _____ careful about telling people I was _____ in Mexico. My family _____ to begin the naturalization process, but _____ scared of what might happen. We have family friends who've _____ and ended up getting deported. My parents are scared the same thing could happen _____ us. We have no idea what _____.

Now that I'm applying to _____, my immigration status _____ a big worry. When Senate Republicans _____ a single Democrat filibustered the Dream Act _____ September, it was a big disappointment _____ me. Without the Dream Act I can't _____ any financial aid U.C. scholarships, _____ student loans.

And then there's the fact that _____ a degree might not guarantee ____ a great job. I don't have ____ social security number or other documentation employers look for. So finding a _____ that pays me well will be _____.

I've actually thought about going to _____ in Mexico and getting a _____ there. Because I speak fluent English _____ Spanish it would be _____ to get a job as a translator. Still, I can't imagine living ____ Mexico. I loved being there ____ vacation, but I knew I'd be returning home, to the U.S.

There have been times where I've asked myself _____ I'm working so hard when my status is working against me. I've felt like giving _____. It's scary -- I have no idea _____ my parents and I will be able ____ _____ for my education without _____. But my parents always taught me that _____ is the best way to get ahead in life. And I'm not going to let them down.

With A Perspective, I'm Estafania.

CLOZE EXERCISE – with highlighted words

The Dream Act From KQED's Perspectives, 11/2010

Born in Mexico but raised in the U.S. since age two, Youth Radio's Estafania longs for U.S. citizenship.

My high school classmates are from all over the world. They travel a lot, to visit their families, and even for school trips to countries like France and Mexico. When friends ask why I can't travel, I say my family can't afford it. But really it's because I might never be able to return home to the U.S.

I consider myself Mexican-American. But because my birth certificate says "Mexico" instead of "United States," there are a lot of things I'm not able to do in this country, even though I've lived here since I was two years old.

Not being a U.S. citizen wasn't a handicap when I was younger. I just knew I had to be careful about telling people I was born in Mexico. My family wants to begin the naturalization process, but we're scared of what might happen. We have family friends who've tried and ended up getting deported. My parents are scared the same thing could happen to us. We have no idea what to do.

Now that I'm applying to college, my immigration status has become a big worry. When Senate Republicans and a single Democrat filibustered the Dream Act in September, it was a big disappointment for me. Without the Dream Act I can't receive any financial aid U.C. scholarships, or student loans.

And then there's the fact that getting a degree might not guarantee me a great job. I don't have a social security number or other documentation employers look for. So finding a job that pays me well will be difficult.

I've actually thought about going to live in Mexico and getting a job there. Because I speak fluent English and Spanish it would be easy to get a job as a translator. Still, I can't imagine living in Mexico. I loved being there on vacation, but I knew I'd be returning home, to the U.S.

There have been times where I've asked myself why I'm working so hard when my status is working against me. I've felt like giving up. It's scary -- I have no idea how my parents and I will be able to pay for my education without help. But my parents always taught me that an education is the best way to get ahead in life. And I'm not going to let them down.

With A Perspective, I'm Estafania.

From - <http://www.kqed.org/a/perspectives/R201011040735>